US-American Gospel-Group is planning tour through Indonesia

The Gospel People begin their Hope Tour

New York/St. Louis, June 2016 | “The Gospel People” will soon begin their 5th international blowout tour with seven powerfully gifted, dedicated singers and musicians, spreading a message of HOPE and the GOOD NEWS wherever they go.

The gospel music genre is one of the most recognizable contributions of the African-American culture to the world. Gospel music permeates society with its positive influence on other types of music, and with its impact on the lives of those who are listen and enjoy. “It is the music of hope,” says Charles Creath, artistic director of TGP, “and this hope is what we want the audience to feel during our concerts.”

Here you will journey with seven musicians - merged into perfect unity - with one goal, one spirit. Their captivating two-hour concert covers a wide range of gospel music, with elements of jazz, soul and the contemporary sounds of today. Merge this impressive artistic performance with an experienced technical team; add a mesmerizing digital light show and the audience is immersed in an unbeatable, unparalleled musical experience. Interactive, with classics like “Amazing Grace,” “We are the World,” and “Oh happy Day”, The Gospel People will debut a new song of hope, arranged especially for this tour this year. This song and the entire gala show is dedicated to everyone in attendance: Encouraging all to travel light, leave their troubles behind, and get ready for a limitless supply of HOPE.

After many successful concerts in Europe the tour has been extended to Asia and Russia. Further information about TGP and the upcoming concerts is available at www.thegospelpeople.com
